Friday Night at the Movies Presents:

Diary of a Country Priest

(1951, 115 minutes, Directed Robert Bresson Not Rated)

French master Bresson tells the story of a priest of Ambricourt (Claude Laydu), a reserved and dedicated young man whose inability to mesh in social situations causes him to feel isolated from the very population he's supposed to be serving. Worse, health problems make him unable to carry out his obligations. Growing ill and ever more confused as to what his life really means, the priest is further distanced from his village and from God. In French, with English subtitles.
