

Remove nuclear arms from Turkey

The United States has approximately 50 nuclear weapons in the unstable nation of Turkey. (This is from Women's Action for New Directions.) This is an unacceptable risk. Nuclear weapons are a grave threat to any population. Should they fall into the hands of any who might use them for their own purposes, millions would die. It is imperative that the United States remove these weapons from Turkey.

Louise Neal, Albany

... Matter is out of her mind to watch an old movie,
"Straight Outta Compton," and, after a visit to the beach city where most have never ventured except to drive through with their windows up and doors locked, ask themselves what has changed.

When they recognize that nothing has changed, they might admit certain still exist.
At the same time, police, and police union leaders, who never acknowledge wrong done, should also watch the

... a blessing to disguise. If people all around the world can clearly see that the benefits to survive we need to jump out of our reactive past and become truly new human beings, then it is still not too late to save ourselves from the madness that is threatening our very existence.

Ann Marie Pugh

Change the math

... for America's success the an effective way to solve a