

Quaker Heritage Day 2018 AT BERKELEY FRIENDS CHURCH
Saturday, March 10, 2018
9 AM to 3:45 PM

“Quakers and the Eco-Reformation”
Presented by Cherice Bock

Location: 1600 Sacramento Street, Berkeley, CA 94702, Two blocks from the North Berkeley BART. AC Transit bus #52 stops at the church. Park on the street, unless mobility-impaired.

Schedule:

9 AM: Register, catch-up with F/friends and have a bite to eat.
9:30 AM: Session 1: Why an Eco-Reformation?
10:45 AM: break
11 AM: Session 2: Quakers & Creation Care: Potentials & Pitfalls in Quaker Theology
12:30 PM: Lunch
1:45 PM: Session 3: Joining the Eco-Reformation through Watershed Discipleship
3:15 PM: Closing Worship

Cherice Bock teaches in the Creation Care Program at Portland Seminary; she is pursuing a PhD in environmental studies. A lifelong Quaker, Bock sees environmental concerns as one of this generation’s most important social justice issues. Visit her website at www.chericebock.com

NOTE: Help us plan a great Quaker Heritage Day. Please RSVP by March 1 if you desire lunch and/or child care during the event.

Register on-line at www.berkeleyfriendschurch.org/QHD or mail in the form below:

Program is free and open to all. Suggested donation: $25 with lunch; $20 without. All donations are welcome and support our annual Quaker Heritage Day event. Make checks out to BFC and put “QH Day” in the memo line. Checks can be mailed to the church address above or collected at the door.

TO HAVE LUNCH OR CHILDCARE PROVIDED, PLEASE RSVP BY MARCH 1, 2018

Phone: _____ and Email: _____

Number of lunches requested: _____, Your name(s) (including names of children and their ages if childcare needed):

Cherice Bock lives in Oregon where she teaches at Portland Seminary of George Fox University, and serves as the Community garden coordinator. She holds an MDiv from Princeton Theological Seminary, and is a PhD candidate in environmental studies at Antioch University New England

She edits the environmental studies journal Whole Terrain, She enjoys growing and tending fruits, veggies, and chickens, hiking and camping in the mountains, and biking. She also spends time on the sidelines as a “soccer mom” of two sons.

A Quaker, Bock sees environmental concerns as one of this generation’s most important social justice issues. Her academic work focuses on nonviolent theology, Quakerism, liberation pedagogy, feminism, environmental justice, and ecotheology. Her recent work includes a study of hope as it relates to environmental care, with research in the fields of psychology, philosophy, ethics, social theory, pedagogy, and theology. Her paper: “Climatologists, Theologians, & Climate Change: Toward an Ecotheology of Critical Hope” appeared in the journal Cross Currents.